

Scalice v Braisted, 116 AD3d 755 [2d Dept 2014] (Appellate court upholds granting of summary judgment to Defendant-Homeowners).

Plaintiff claimed various injuries to her lower extremities resulting in surgical interventions as a consequence of falling at the Defendants single-family home. She claimed, inter alia, that debris was left on stairs, inadequate lighting and an inadequate railing led to her accident. At the Supreme Court level, summary judgment was granted upon a finding that the property owners met their duty of maintaining the property in a reasonably safe condition. The Appellate Court affirmed the decision dismissing the action. Appeal written and argued by Joshua H. Stern.
